SPECIAL TONIGHT

ONLY LIGHT VOTE BEING CAST IN THE PRIMARIES; MORE REPUBLICANS VOTING

Voting all over the city in the primary election Tuesday for state, district, and county offices was exceedingly light, which may have a tendency to upset the previous dope on the outcome in the various contests. Especially is this true of the Democratic primary, which promises the lightest vote in years. Unless the Democratic voters take a spurt during the closing hours of the day, less than thirty per cent of the total vote will be cast in the city.

The Republican vote will exceed the Democratic vote by a ratio of two to one or greater in Portsmouth, judging from indications Tuesday afternoon. In some precincts, the Republican vote was above the average, while it is considerably larger than the Democratic vote in every precinct in the city. This is probably due to the fact that there are more camps on the Republican side, and the candidates are busy among their friends.

A heavy rain fell throughout a goodly portion of the day, which also caused many voters to remain away from the polls. The rain is general all over the county, and the indications that the vote will be light in the majority of the precincts. The election officials in Washington township, however, sent a hurry call to the county election board early Tuesday afternoon for more Republican ballots, indicating a heavy Republican vote there.

The board of elections was in session during the entire day, but at a late hour Tuesday afternoon nothing of importance had been brought to their attention during the day.

2 CLEVER ARRESTS ARE MADE BY POLICE

Local police authorities are holding two prisoners at the city jail awaiting transportation to Kentucky, where they are wanted for offenses there, one of which is of a serious nature.

A government inspector dropped into Portsmouth early Monday evening, and before the night was over, Henry Hensley, a brick yard worker, was under arrest on a charge of robbing the safe at the Office Hill, Ky., postoffice about a week ago. Hensley was arrested at New Boston by the inspector and the New Boston authorities, and brought to the local jail about two o'clock Tuesday morning. Hensley came to Portsmouth Wednesday, according to the information in the hands of the police. He will be held until requisition papers have been made out for his return to Kentucky.

The local police are also holding Albert Deaterle for the Greenup, Ky., authorities. He was arrested in the North End Monday at their request but the nature of the crime for which he is wanted to answer was not made known. In the requisition papers, made out in Governor McCreary's office a few days ago, his name was given as Albert Deaterle, and the man will have to be held here until a change can be made in the papers, which are now in Gov. Cox's office at Columbus. A Greenup officer left for Columbus Monday evening to get the corrected papers.

AUSTRIAN CROWN PRINCE IN THE FIELD

ITALY AND AUSTRIA ARE ON WAR'S VERGE

Rome, Aug. 11.—Italy took the first step toward war with Austria today by demanding from Vienna an explanation of the bombardment of Italian business houses when the Montenegrin port of Antivari was shelled by an Austrian fleet. The demand is based particularly on the damage done to the buildings of the Puglia company which contained a number of Italians when the port was shelled and over which the Italian flag was flying. According to reports the Austrian gunners directed their shells upon the Puglia buildings for some time despite the fact that the Italian flag could be plainly seen by them. The Italian ambassador at Vienna has been instructed to inform the Austrian foreign minister that Italy expects a satisfactory explanation immediately. If Austria fails to furnish it, it is probable that Italy will immediately recall her ambassador and break off diplomatic relations with her ally. It was admitted at the Italian foreign office that the relations between Italy and Austria are daily becoming more strained.

WAR

The resumption of the battle indicates that the Germans have been reinforced by the third army corps known as the "iron" corps numbering forty thousand soldiers. If this is correct the Germans have 160,000 troops operating against Liege. Though the main attack did not begin until dawn a night attack had been made on Fort Siering, south of Liege where a severe conflict took place. In the darkness a German column was sent forward to take the fort at the point of the bayonet. The advancing troops were revealed, however, by the flash light on the fort and the artillery was turned on the German troops. Bursting shrapnel tore great gaps in the ranks of the advancing troops, but they continued to move forward encouraged by their officers. The slopes leading to the gaps of the forts were strewn with dead and wounded. The Belgian gunners having no difficulty in finding the range under the glare of the flashlights. The ramparts of the fort were aflame, but the only sound which came from the German ranks were the battle cries, "Fatherland, Onward for the Fatherland."
It is estimated that at least 800 Germans fell in an area of half a square mile. The German soldiers showed conspicuous valiantry. In the face of terrific cannonade they moved forward without a falter.
It was necessary for the German troops to cross a bridge on which the Belgian guns directed their fire. The structure, weakened by the shells, collapsed, carrying hundreds of soldiers into the water. Those who had crossed the bridge moved steadily on in the face of the withering fire. They gained the barbed-wire abatis in front of the fort and were tearing it away when Belgian machine guns were turned loose. The van of the Germans was quickly swept away and the troops were compelled to retreat.
In the vanguard of the assault was Prince William of Lippe. His body was identified by Belgians. By his side lay his son, both killed in the machine gun fire. They were buried with military honors under the walls of the fort.
The bodies of German and Belgian soldiers that fell, or were thrown into the Meuse during the early stages of the fighting around the fort at Liege, are now coming to the surface in large numbers.

Repainting Smokestacks of Treasure Ship at Sea To Disguise Her on Her Run Back to America

On the now famous flight of the Hamburg American liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie back to the United States from the coast of Ireland with more than $13,000,000 in bullion Capt. Polack did everything he could to escape British or French cruisers. His first thought was to repaint the huge smokestacks to make them look like those of the White Star, an English line. He sent his painters aloft while the ship was speeding as she had never before. Capt. Polack figured he could make his ship appear to wear the same livery as the Olympic, which was due in New York Thursday, August 6.
He, therefore, had his men color the smokestacks with black tops. This is the story of Father Luckner, a passenger:
"We came quite close to, and I believe ran between two French ships. I think the Cecilie's officers saw one of them, which sent over the query by wireless: 'Have you seen anything of the Cecilie?'
"We have not heard from her or seen her." Captain Polack answered. The conversation was not continued.

German Soldiers on the March Moving Cannon Stuck in a Field.

Hundreds of cannon like this are being moved into Belgium by the German troops. One report said the other day that Berlin had ordered the mobilization of no fewer than 800,000 troops for the campaign in Belgium. Of course, that number would overflow King Albert in short order.

But the hard fighting of the views the horses which haul the cannon are removed. They would French troops to come up, and if not stand the strain of fighting, is expected Great Britain will land and in such cases the heavy guns soldiers. In some German manner must be removed about by hand.

Columbus, Aug. 11.—The new Ohio state-wide civil service law is getting its first real test in the primaries today. The law specifically prohibits political activity on the part of public employees who are under civil service protection, but from many parts of the state reports say that this provision of the law is being ignored and that groups of employees have been called out by party leaders to do service at the polls. State civil service officials are investigating and threaten trouble if they find the report correct.

The law placed by the law upon the political activity, has caused much controversy. It was strongly opposed by party leaders before the law originally was passed, but friends of the civil service finally succeeded in forcing it on the ground that unless it was made a part of the law, the law itself would be ineffective in driving parties out of the public service. It was argued, moreover, that if the provision was strictly enforced, it would spell the death of the power of party bosses for the simple reason that the bulk of every party organization is made up of public employees. If such employees are secured that they need not obey the mandate of the party boss, it is argued that the boss will necessarily be shown of his power. The result of whether or not the law will be generally enforced is being made today for this is the first general election since the civil service law became effective. The point that it is being made today is being made today for this is the first general election since the civil service law became effective.

Most of the candidates for state-wide nominations at the hands of their party will receive the news of their victory or defeat this evening at their homes. Governor Cox will soon receive an exception in receiving the returns in his office at the statehouse. Special bulletins will be sent to him there and tabulations of the result as it becomes known will be made for him by experts. Without any known exception, the state-wide candidates all voted today in their home precincts, the governor himself having gone to Dayton early this morning in order to return to night to Columbus.

Ohio voters today are really making political history. They are taking the place for the first time in Ohio political annals on the old-time party convention which nominated party candidates for the congressional election. Suspicious of the power of party leaders to manipulate conventions, the people around the constitution in 1912 abolished the nominating conventions entirely. The primaries today represent the first experiment made in the changed rules of the game. The experiment shows clearly that the voter, taken on a sturdy tack, even though new powers and privileges come with it. Voters entering the poll throughout the state are facing the task of having a ballot of 11 candidates for state nominations in addition to the almost countless congressional county and committee candidates.

Named For Ball Players.

Among the latest supply of catalogues and suit patterns just received by John Redpenning, a Gallia street merchant tailor, are a set of the various pieces of which are named after star ball players of the country. Among the number is a "Bridwell" suit which John expects to place on display. It is named after Portsmouth's popular short stop.

Troop 8 Enjoys Fine Visit To Carter Caves

Troop No. 8 left on their hike to Carter Caves on the Steamer Klondike on Monday, August 3, 1914, at 2 p. m. They were under the leadership of two able-bodied men, namely, M. H. E. Kinsey and Rev. E. G. Hamilton.

The trip down the river was enjoyed by all and we arrived at Quincy, where we were to start our hiking at 3:30 p. m.

We stopped at a grocery store and inquired about the way. We hiked one-fourth mile west of Quincy and turned down a road, bound for Montgomery Creek.

While we were passing a place in the road that was covered with thick underbrush, Zachary Fugitt killed a snake about three feet long.

On our way we passed several houses where we secured water, and at one place where three plain trees were located, we were treated to some very delicious red plums. Talk about good! Why "Zack" Fugitt ate so many that he and several others were greatly affected with a hickory stomach.

We kept on our road, climbing a few hills and going through two hollows, until we reached a place where a small creek flowed and we decided to pitch our camp there for the night. We built our fires and cooked supper, after which we prepared to sleep.

We went to bed at 8:30 and slept until 3:30 the next morning. As we had been told that "Three Prongs" was near, we decided to call our camp "Camp Three Prongs."

We broke camp at 6 a. m. and proceeded on our way, expecting to reach Carter City at noon. We inquired about the road about the electric, but as we drew closer, the caves seemed to get further away.

We hiked on and rested with parts of our bodies in each of two coves, namely, Lewis and Grumpy. We saw many cavers and other interesting things.

We reached again on a hill, near Carter and drank from an old fashioned well.

Upon going down the hill, Glenn Moore and Earl Plan killed a black snake, the length of which was 4 feet 4 inches.

We stopped at the bottom of the hill for target practice, for Rev. Hamilton had brought a rifle and some shells, and Glenn Moore and Rev. Hamilton proved the best shots.

We entered Carter about 10:15 and some ate dinner at the hotel while the rest ate on the banks of the creek.

Most of all the boys bathed in the creek in the afternoon and ate supper at 6:30. After supper, we "staked up" and hiked out of Carter to the scene of many a fine summer camp, "Camp Powell."

We built large camp fires and had a fire program, after which all retired to their beds for a good night's rest.

We arose at 4 in the morning on Wednesday, and after eating our first hot camp at 6. We hiked to the caves, but rested an hour before venturing inside.

We visited "Salt Peter" cave first, and if you never did see a surprised bunch before, you could have seen one then. Why some of us had never dreamed of such things. Some centers were selected by all and the most interesting things seen were the "Devil's Pit," "Moonshiner's Distill," and "Bottomless Pit."

We ate dinner at the mouth of the cave and rested until 1:30. We then made ready to visit "Flat Cave." We entered by way of a gorgeous natural bridge and selected convenient.

The most interesting things seen in this cave were the "caterpillar," the "perched elephant," the "underground river," and the "secret chamber." This is the only cave in the world which has two stories.

After we were all in the "secret chamber," we were ordered to sit down and blow out our lights. Oh, but it was so dark! The guide gave us a chance to find the passage and we could not get lost, as there was only one. After much searching, Arthur Dell and Harold Dunn found it, proving their knowledge of path finding. They were the second ones to ever find it. Harry Blake, of this city, being the first. We emerged from the cave at 3:15, having been in it two hours and ten minutes.

We hiked back to Camp Powell, where we put up for the night, going to bed at 9.

Thursday morning we arose at 4 and left Carter City at 6:30 a. m.

Gen. Joffre, French Commander-in-Chief,
Asking Artillerymen About Their Efficiency.

General Joffre, commander-in-chief of the French army, has gone to the front to check the advance of the Germans or to lead his forces on to Berlin in answer to the cry of the Parisian mob the night Germany declared war on Russia.

Since most of the fighting seems to be in Belgium it was considered likely that he would march in with the French army headed to help King Albert maintain his wonderful stand against the determined and relentless attack of the Germans on Liege.

STREET CAR AND WAGON COLLIDE

Storm Damage

A street car going East on Eleventh street, and a two-horse wagon being driven by William Beecher Brown, Jr., of Stockdale, and which was shared by John H. Dewey had a collision at Eleventh and Lincoln streets at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. They came together with sufficient force to hurl Brown and Dewey from the front seat of the wagon and to damage the vehicle considerably. The horses cleared the car, and were not injured. Brown suffered a cut over his left eye, his left wrist was slightly sprained and he received a cut on the head. Dewey escaped with minor contusions.

Mr. Brown was driving north on Lincoln street from Gallia when the collision took place. He failed to observe the car bearing down upon him until too late to avoid the smashup. Motorman J. Daniels was in charge of the car. He saw that a collision was inevitable and quickly grabbed the brakes and succeeded in reducing the speed of the car. The conductor was S. Sturtevant.

The wagon which had one wheel torn off and its body knocked out of shape was taken to the plant of the Carroll Vehicle company for repairs. Mr. Brown lost considerable produce in the smash up and six dozen of eggs were broken. Brown, who is a well-known farmer, had a close call from being thrown directly in the path of the car.

Fred Higley is now qualified to talk about the wretched condition of the Gallia pike. He started to travel in a machine Tuesday morning. He only started for he found the road in such terrible shape that he had to get 30 men more or less to help him turn his car around and return to Portsmouth.

It is Just Natural To Admire Babies

Our attractive nature impels love for the tender infant. And at the same time the subject of motherhood is ever before us. To know what to do that will add to the physical comfort of expectant motherhood is a subject that has interested most women of all times. One of the most helpful things is an external abdominal support sold in most drug stores under the name of "Mother's Friend." We have known so many grand mothers, who in their younger days relied upon this remedy, and who recommended it to their own daughters that it certainly must be what its name indicates. They have used it for the direct influence upon the muscular cords, the movements and tenderness as it alone to afford relief from the strain and pain so often unecessarily severe during the period of pregnancy.

Any woman should mention "Mother's Friend" with the dealer in the subject of maternity. An interesting little book is mailed free upon application to Dr. J. C. Rogers, Co., and Tanager, 1912, Atlantic City. It refers to many things that women like to read about. Get at once a bottle of "Mother's Friend" today and write for the book.

Many Already Are Seeking Space For Big Korn Carnival

The Retail Merchants Association held its monthly meeting Monday evening. Secretary Karl Zoellner reported that applications for booths for display purposes during the Korn Carnival were pouring in and that the Carnival was sure to be an unequalled success.

The executive committee announced that quite a number of merchants had increased the size of their donation over that of last year and the financial end of the big show will be well cared for. Many out of town firms are making applications for booth room and this feature of the show promises to far surpass that of the 1913 Carnival.

Practically every retail store in the city will be closed Thursday afternoon when the Retail Merchants will hold their annual outing in Millbrook park. The program has been shaped up and the merchants, their clubs and families will take possession of Millbrook on Thursday.

CHAUTAUQUA NEWS

Hon. S. D. Fess will deliver a lecture at the Adams County Chautauqua Wednesday afternoon. The Euclid Mule Quartet will also appear on the afternoon program and on the evening program.

The feature of Thursday's program will be the appearance of John B. Ratta, who created such a favorable impression at the local Chautauqua.

Quiet Day.

The rain, primary election and closing of saloons combined to give Portsmouth a quiet aspect Tuesday. The rain was worth thousands of dollars.

Tipple Is Burned

Paul Esselhorn who returned from a business trip to Jackson and Wellston reported that the big tipple of the Superior Coal company two miles east of the latter city, was completely destroyed by fire Tuesday morning at 4 o'clock.

QUEER MIX-UP IN BICYCLES

Clarence Bess, a collector for A. Brunner & Sons, figured in a queer mix-up on bicycles a few days ago. A West Side truck gardener named Cooper had stepped into Brunner's downtown store and requested the use of a bicycle on which to ride to the mayor's office, where he had some business.

He took Bess' wheel to the police station, and when he departed, he left Bess' wheel and rode off with another that had been put in its place.

Later Bess discovered his wheel gone. It was an hour or so later, that Adolph Brunner recalled Cooper's ride to the mayor's office and the bicycles were restored to their rightful owners.
